

Duker house 1221 Park Place

The Duker house was built in 1910 for John L. Duker, a local banker with Quincy National Bank. The home was part of Quincy's first planned subdivision. Mark C. "Ted" and Elsie Huck lived in the home from 1944 to 1976.

Since then, the structure has been home to John and Karen Spring and their children, Stacey, Michael and Josh.

Quincy Press Brick is used extensively through this Romanesque Revival/Queen Anne residence. Brick detailing includes vertical banding above the windows, a herringbone design near the roof line, crossed brick on the east bay, corner curved brick and a quoined chimney on the house's west side.

A twin Roman arched window on the front second story facade highlights the Romanesque Revival style. The entire main structure is covered with a pressed tin roof.

Stained glass is featured prominently in the transom over the front double door, on the front landing and above the main first story bay window. Butternut wood is visible through the interior, notably on the front stairs.
