

two sons, Arthur J. and Willis E. Dick. Also, in 1889, Albert and Anna built the house at 1100 State Street. Buerkin and Kaempfen were the contractors for the project, charging $1140 for the brickwork and $900 for the stonework¹.

The Albert and Anna Dick House is significant not only because of the major contributions the Dick family made to the city of Quincy, but also because the property is an outstanding Queen Anne house. The building has many unusual features to note, such as the cut stone beltcourses and trim, the imperial-domed tower with its integrated wrap-around porch below, the arched openings on the west facade with wood sunburst carving under the arches, and the large arched window on the north facade with a carved stone frame.

The property was sold to George L. Klein in 1931 and has remained in the Klein family ever since.

The Albert and Anna Dick house is listed on the National Register of Historic Places as a contributing property of the South Side German Historic District.

Legal Description

Lot Five (5) in Block Seventy-two (72) in John Wood's Addition to the City of Quincy, in Adams County, Illinois, according to the certain subdivision and plat of said Block set out and contained in the decree recorded in Chancery Record A22 at page 307, in the Office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of said County, and said plat is generally known as the plat of Mathew Dick Subdivision of said Block Seventy-two (72), situated in the County of Adams, in the State of Illinois;

¹ Buerkin and Kaempfen daybooks, Gardner Museum of Architecture and Design.