

enframed and pedimented in the manner of the side door on the east elevation. Windows also were probably changed to multiple panes per sash, more common of the Colonial Revival than of the Italianate. The chimneys were also elongated.